About the Summit

BUILDING RESILIENCY

Climate-driven catastrophes—from wildfires in California and the Northeast to flooding in the Carolinas, Florida, Vermont, and the Plains—are reshaping the future of infrastructure, insurance, and municipal finance. With rebuilding costs soaring and insurers retreating from high-risk areas, public and private sector leaders are urgently seeking solutions.

This event convenes the key decision-makers—from government agencies and municipal leaders to investors and infrastructure providers—who are actively planning for resilience, funding disaster recovery, and rethinking risk management in real time.

As a sponsor, you'll position your brand at the center of these vital conversations—showcasing how your solutions support smarter planning, risk mitigation, financial sustainability, and community rebuilding.

Whether your company offers data analytics, insurance innovation, construction and infrastructure services, or financial expertise, this is your opportunity to lead in a high-stakes, high-impact environment.

Climate Resiliency: Panel Discussions

Panel 1

Insurance flight risk in climate-affected regions

As more insurers pull back from riskier geographic areas, the knock-on effects of tax revenue losses and loss of housing to municipal credit are growing.

Panel 2

The investor perspective

For years, climate concerns have yet to be priced into the municipal market. Will the aftershocks from the L.A. wildfires — the upward of $275 billion of expected losses, downgrades to L.A. credit and a widening of spreads — finally shift the overall investor mindset?

Panel 3

Federal responses amid massive deficits

With the new administration taking shape and potential tax cuts, federal deficits and spending on state and local governments is already in the crosshairs. How the Republican-led White House and Congress view funding for issuers could dramatically alter muni credit and how much the federal government, via FEMA, will aid governments after natural disasters.

Panel 4

Lawsuits against utilities in Cal fires

Additionally, we will explore how lawsuits against utilities - both public and private - in the wake of the wildfires may challenge the public power sector across the country.
